BMCC hires Rick Bombaci as new Wallowa Business Advisor for SBDC

ENTERPRISE, Ore. – There’s a new face at Blue Mountain Community College’s Small Business Development Center (SBDC) in Wallowa County. Rick Bombaci, who has lived in Wallowa County since 1980, will serve as the SBDC’s new Wallowa County Business Advisor. He begins his new role today (June 1).

Bombaci has worked in a variety of business roles throughout his career, during which he developed strong relationships with individuals and organizations throughout Wallowa County. He spent four years as a high school business teacher, 20 years as a computer business owner, four years as a business development officer, five years as a development director and five years as a business consultant. He has experience in both the for- and non-profit industries.

As a business owner, Bombaci became well-aquainted with the practice of visiting clients on-site, learning about how different businesses operate. He not only assisted these businesses with creating solutions, but he earned respect by developing trust and respecting confidentiality with his clients.
